INVESCO AIM LAUNCHES AIM CORE PLUS BOND FUND

PRODUCT TO UTILIZE INVESCO WORLDWIDE FIXED INCOME'S BROAD INVESTMENT CAPABILITIES

HOUSTON, June 3, 2009 - Invesco Aim today announced the launch of AIM Core Plus Bond Fund (Class A ticker symbol: ACPSX) for investors looking to diversify their fixed-income holdings and seeking to opportunistically enhance long-term relative returns.

The fund's investment objective is to seek total return by primarily investing in investment-grade securities, including corporate bonds, U.S. Treasury and agency securities, mortgage-backed securities, and asset-backed securities. The fund also will provide investors exposure to foreign government and corporate debt, emerging market debt, structured and non-investment-grade bonds.

Investment decisions will be made by a team of four portfolio managers. They will construct the fund's portfolio using the global resources of Invesco Worldwide Fixed Income, which is composed of 120 investment professionals with approximately $150 billion in assets under management across a broad array of fixed-income securities.

"We are pleased to complement our existing fixed-income lineup by making this new investment solution available to investors through the extensive investment capabilities of Invesco Worldwide Fixed Income," said Phil Taylor, Senior Managing Director and Head of Invesco's North American retail business, including Invesco Aim. "This is another example of Invesco Aim's strategic priority of developing a broad, all-weather product line by delivering diversified investment strategies tailored to our clients' needs."

Chuck Burge, Cynthia Brien, Peter Ehret and Claudia Calich of Invesco Worldwide Fixed Income will serve as portfolio managers for the fund. They will construct the fund's portfolio using a distributed decision-making process that incorporates both top-down and bottom-up analysis.

Mr. Burge is a senior portfolio manager who has been with Invesco since 2002 and has 14 years of fixed-income investment experience. Ms. Brien, Mr. Ehret and Ms. Calich are portfolio managers with a combined 60 years of fixed-income investment experience.

Risks of Investing in AIM Core Plus Bond Fund

Foreign securities have additional risks, including exchange rate changes, political and economic upheaval, relative lack of information, relatively low market liquidity, and the potential lack of strict financial and accounting controls and standards.

The fund is subject to currency/exchange rate risk because it may buy or sell currencies other than the U.S. dollar.

Interest rate risk refers to the risk that bond prices generally fall as interest rates rise and vice versa.

Credit risk is the risk of loss on an investment due to the deterioration of an issuer's financial health. Such a deterioration of financial health may result in a reduction of the credit rating of the issuer's securities and may lead to the issuer's inability to honor its contractual obligations, including making timely payment of interest and principal.

Lower rated securities may be more susceptible to real or perceived adverse economic and competitive industry conditions, and the secondary markets in which lower rated securities are traded may be less liquid than higher grade securities. The loans in which the fund may invest are typically noninvestment-grade and involve a greater risk of default on interest and principal payments and of price changes due to the changes in the credit quality of the issuer.

The prices of securities held by the fund may decline in response to market risks.

Reinvestment risk is the risk that a bond's cash flows will be reinvested at an interest rate below that of the original bond.

The fund may invest in mortgage- and asset-backed securities. These securities are subject to prepayment or call risk, which is the risk that payments from the borrower may be received earlier or later than expected due to changes in the rate at which the underlying loans are prepaid.

Nondiversification increases the risk that the value of the fund's shares may vary more widely, and the fund may be subject to greater investment and credit risk than if it invested more broadly.

A majority of the fund's assets are likely to be invested in loans and securities that are less liquid than those rated on national exchanges.

Investing in developing countries can add additional risk, such as high rates of inflation or sharply devalued currencies against the U.S. dollar. Transaction costs are often higher, and there may be delays in settlement procedures.

The fund may use enhanced investment techniques such as derivatives. The principal risk of derivatives is that the fluctuations in their values may not correlate perfectly with the overall securities markets. Derivatives are subject to counterparty risk - the risk that the other party will not complete the transaction with the fund.

The fund may invest in obligations issued by agencies and instrumentalities of the U.S. government that may vary in the level of support they receive from the U.S. government. The U.S. government may choose not to provide financial support to U.S.-government-sponsored agencies or instrumentalities if it is not legally obligated to do so. In this case, if the issuer defaulted, the fund holding securities of such issuer might not be able to recover its investment from the U.S. government.

Individually negotiated, or over the counter, derivatives are subject to counterparty risk, which is the risk the other party to the contract will not fulfill its contractual obligation to complete the transaction with the fund.

Leveraging entails risks such as magnifying changes in the value of the portfolio's securities.

There is no guarantee that the investment techniques and risk analysis used by the fund's portfolio managers will produce the desired results.

Since a large percentage of the fund's assets may be invested in securities of a limited number of companies, each investment has a greater effect on the fund's overall performance, and any change in the value of those securities could significantly affect the value of an investment in the fund.
